An Introduction

The Australian Institute of Building (AIB) is the preeminent organisation supporting the career development of building professionals in Australia and internationally. The Institute's primary focus is to promote building as a genuine profession and to ensure that the building and construction industry has access to qualified and experienced graduates who go on to become project managers, construction directors and general managers / chief executives.

The AIB Corporate Supporter packages provide your firm with the opportunity to clearly demonstrate a commitment to the building profession.

In accepting this invitation to become an AIB Corporate Supporter your firm will directly benefit through its involvement in initiatives such as the AIB Professional Excellence In Building Awards and the annual Construct conference. The AIB Professional Excellence in Building Awards program is unique as it is the only awards program in Australia that recognises the expertise of individual building professionals, rather than the quality of a completed project.

Companies that enjoy the status of being an AIB Corporate Supporter will also benefit from an association with activities that include accreditation of university courses in building disciplines, provision of continuing professional development courses and production of the Construct magazine and newsletter .

If your organisation has a genuine commitment to supporting the career development of building professionals, becoming an AIB Corporate Supporter is an excellent way to demonstrate this commitment.

AIB Initiatives to support building professionals include:

- Providing seminars, workshops and training courses.
- Publishing the Construct magazine and newsletter.
- Organising the annual Construct conference.
- Working as an effective advocate for the building professional at a national and state / territory level.
- Providing an authoritative source for media comment on issues relating to building professionals.
- Supporting the establishment and ongoing relevance of university building and construction degrees.
- Publishing the Australasian Journal of Construction Economics and building academic journal.
- Supporting industry-driven innovation.
- Organising the AIB Professional Excellence In Building Awards and the AIB Young Achievers award programs to recognise individuals.

AIB - A Brief Introduction

The Australian Institute of Building (AIB), founded in 1951 and granted a Royal Charter in 1969, is an association of building professionals and senior academics engaged in building practice, teaching or research throughout Australia and overseas. AIB members include project managers and senior management of building and construction firms.

The mission of AIB is to be the leading professional institute for individuals in the building and construction industry, valued for its services to members and reflecting its ideals for higher education, standards and ethics. The AIB aims to be the source of authoritative and visionary comment on behalf of professionals in the industry. Broadly, the objectives of AIB are:

- To promote excellence in the construction of buildings and honourable practices in the conduct of business;
- To advance the study of building and all kindred matters, arts and sciences;
- To encourage the friendly exchange between members of knowledge in the practical, technical and ethical aspects of building and construction;
- To uphold the dignity of the profession of building and the status of AIB; and
- To increase the education and professionalism of individuals in the building and construction industry.

Through various initiatives, the AIB is committed to ensuring that the graduates of tomorrow have the competency required to enter the building industry. The Institute is actively involved in promotion, development and accreditation of university courses in building and construction management disciplines. Further, the AIB encourages secondary school students to pursue a career in the building profession.

Initiatives such as these guarantee that future professionals in the building and construction industry maintain a high and fair standard of conducting business.

Finally, the AIB acts on behalf of its members to provide consolidated representation to various building and construction associations and businesses, the Commonwealth and State Governments and also within the industry.
